

Head of Philanthropy

The Burnet Institute is internationally renowned for undertaking medical research and public health programs to address the major health problems of disadvantaged and poor communities. With expanded world class Melbourne laboratories, and offices in Asia, Africa and the Pacific, Burnet's contribution to global health continues to grow.

Reporting to a highly regarded CEO, and working with key stakeholders, you will lead the major gifts program and engage with high level private donors. The Head of Philanthropy at the Burnet will also serve as Director of the Sir Zelman Cowen Foundation for Medical Research and Public Health.

This prestigious and vital position demands a self-motivated professional with a record of thinking strategically, building relationships and generating tangible commitment and support.
